Repealed

The Constitutionality of the Test Onth. impartial reading of the letter of G. Parker, Esq., in this morning's issue, seems to us President Johnson is in-consistent as between his official acts and the declarations in the message. Referring to the necessity for restoring the United States Courts in the rebellious States, he declares:

the courts, the communities in which the persons who have committed treation reside have the right, and ought to have the opportunity, to present them for indictment, trial and punishment.

This the courts, the communities in which the courts of the one on the one hand or the other, we do not have the opportunity, to present them for indictment, trial and punishment. Yet instead of awaiting that restoration outraged communities an opportunity of arraigning traitors before the judicial tribunals of the country, the President steps in and by special pardons forbids South. If any men were to be tried by the courts these (now pardoned) leaders were the ones. Under such circumstances, there seems to be a slight savor of mockery in the declarations quoted.

Regulation of Suffrage ---- Proposed Amendment to the State Constitu-tion.

One portion of the President's mes one portion of the Fresident's mea-sage possesses for our West Virginia readers a local application, and, we trust, a local interest. It is that in which he discusses the regulation of suffrage. He affirms that the power of regulating suffrage rests entirely in the individual States, each establishing its own rules, and extending or contracting the privilege as it may choose, within the "republican form of govern-ment" which the general government is required to maintain in each State.

doubt believed. such action on the part of the State would conflict with the action of the Executive of the United States in the case of those who had received the President's amnesty. President Johnson himself effectually dissipates any such supposition. He has repeatedly declared, but never so directly or offi-cially as now, that the General Government cannot and does not assume to interfere in any way with suffrage in the several States. He says now in terms that can be neither misconstrued

When, at the first movement towards Independence, the Congress of the Uni-ted States Instructed the several States fed States instructed the several States to institute governments of their own, they left each State to decide for itself the conditions for the enjoyment of the elective franchise. During the period of the confederacy, there continued to exist a very great diversity in the qualifications of the electors in the several States; and even within a State a distinction of analigations revealed within States; and even within a State a distinction of qualifications prevailed with regard to the officers who were to be chosen. The Constitution of the United States recognizes these diversities when it enjoins that, in the choice of members of the House of Representatives of the United States, "the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerour branch of the State Legislature." After the formation of the Constitution, it remained, as before, the uniform usage for each State to enlarge the body of its electors, according to its own judgment; and, under this system, one State after another has proceeded to increase the number of its electors, until now universal suffrage, or something very near it, is the general rule. So fixed was this reservation of power in a leabits of the people, and so unquestoned has been the interpretation of the Constitution, that during the civil war the late President uning the civil t oned has been the interpretation of the Constitution, that during the civil war the late President never harbored the purpose—certainly never avowed the purpose—of disregarding it; and in the acts of Congress, during that peri-od, nothing can be found which, during the continuance of hostilities, much ess after their close, would have sanc-tioned any departure by the Executive from a policy which has so uniformly obtained.

Let us end the case stands respecting dov. Perpoint thinks it will require the proposed amendment of our State a taxation of at least sixty cents on the

our people is a very simple one. The attention drawn to it since the amendment was proposed, has stripped it of issued by the rebel State amount to ambiguity. The people of the State five or six millions of dollars, A numbave the full and absolute power to ber of counties and corporations also the United States Courts in the rebellious States, he declares:

"It is manifest that treason, most flagrant in character, has been committed. Persons who are charged with its commission should have fair and impartial trials in the highest civil tribunals of the country, in order that the Constitution and the laws may be fully vindicated, the truth clearly established and affirmed that treason is a crime, that traitors should be punished and the offence made infamous, and at the same time that the question may be judicially settled, finally and forever, that no State, of its own will, has the right to renounce its place in the Union."

In these propositions, which the President has repeatedly given expression to before, the loyal people everywhere heartily concur. When opportunity shall be afforded by the restoration of the courts, the communities in which the persons who have committed treason be constrained only by the reasons cach may entertain for prefering the courts, the communities in which the persons who have committed treason by adding the rebellion of the doller on the courts, the communities in which the persons who have committed treason of the one hand or the other, we do not the one hand or the other, we do not the one hand or the other, we do not the constraint of the con clude the persons whom the amendment proposes to exclude. ginla gets half justice. It will be remembered that the State of Virginia before the war. formally transferred all these stocks to West Virginia, and they will be accounted for when the settlement takes place. We dont see, therefore that they have any particular place in Richmond calculations.

The load of debt exhibited is a heavy one. "This State's just share," of that R Bri debt we bind ourselves in our Constitution to pay, but that will not be a very large sum, for nearly the whole of the debt was incurred for the benefit of works not within this State.

The Governor says $5,000,000 interest will soon be due English bond holders, who are pressing for its payment. In suggesting means of meeting the demand and paying the State debt, he speaks of "supposing West Virginia should pay ber full share, according to the taxation ber full share, according to the taxation of 1860." We respectfully submit that is a pretty strong supposition. Nine-tenths of this debt was incurred for the benefit of the eastern portion of the State. If they suppose at Richmond State. We can scarcely hope in this age of the world for such thorough reformation as proposed, and though we recognize that Mr. Hine is clearly right on the moral question, we are content for the present to make it a material question, and seek a reformation of the land system here because the material welfare of the people demands it. True prosperity and abstract justice are never far apart. If we cannot get the justice first and prosperity and abstract justice are never far apart. If we cannot get the justice first and prosperity and abstract justice are never far apart. If we cannot get the justice first and prosperity and abstract justice are never far apart. If we cannot get the justice first and hope for right afterwards.

Mr. Hine is doubtless well known to many of our readers as a gentleman who has labored zealously for several years to bring about a reformation of the land system in Ohio and indeed throughout the United States.

Making Treases Infamous.

The constitution already excludes from the privilege of suffrage all colored to the tenty-one years of age, or who are under conviction of treason, fellony or bribery in an election, or who have not resided in the State a year and in the county a month, and citizens refusing in time of war or insurrection to take a particular oath. The amendment proposes to exclude also citizens who have aided the rebellion since June 18. The proposition to amend is made in the mode prescribed by the general Assembly of counties became organized by the counties of Berkeley and Jefferson:
